Description :

Présentation de l'auteur
In the west the ancient empire of Prast crumbles, an old man too sick to climb out of his deathbed. To the east an upstart nation of sun worshipers spread their heathen ways, swallowing up city-states and small kingdoms as they tread ever closer to Prast's borders. War is inevitable. A war greater and more bloodthirsty than any seen since the old gods left the world. And yet, war is as nothing compared to the greatest danger. The Shadowland. A vast swathe of corrupted jungles, deserts and mountains, saturated in malevolence. Ever since the time of myth it has separated east from west, a mark on the world to remind all men of the anger of their gods. Now it has begun to spread, spewing out its deadly creatures on the nations, threatening to corrupt and consume everything. Only one man carries the key to stopping the Shadowlands progress. A man battered and scarred from his years alone in its deadly grasp. To stop it he must first make a friend of his greatest enemy and then he must enter the Shadowland again.
